Collection: Young Men's-Young Women's Hebrew Association

Description Level: Series

Scope and Content:

The 1930s were a difficult time for young people to be educated because of the Depression and lack of jobs, so the Y opened up an Evening High School. Many different subjects were taught, including math and science. Correspondences between Baron Byng High School and Harvey Golden were conducted in order to receive advice on how to administer this high school. This sub-series includes class schedules and equipment lists.
