The Jewish People's Schools of Montreal was created by members or sympathizers of the Poale Zion (Labour Zionist) movement in 1914. They wanted to provide Montreal's Jewish school children with a curriculum of Hebrew (h), Yiddish (y), Zionism, Jewish history, literature and culture and a "modified program of teaching about religion." Also stressed were Jewish and world social issues along with regular secular studies. It has moved locations several times over the decades and changed from providing afternoon and evening classes to Montreal's first Hebrew kindergarten and day school. In 1971, the "Folk Shule" merged with the Peretz Schools and became known as the Jewish People's and Peretz Schools (JPPS) at the elementary level. In 1972 the Bialik High School was founded.
